A Mother's Love

One evening, Ravi saw a mother squirrel and her baby sitting on a branch of the mango tree in his garden. They were eating ripe mangoes. Ravi was annoyed and threw a stone at them to make them stop eating his mangoes. The mango the mother squirrel was eating fell to the ground. But the baby squirrel did not let go of his mango and fell to the ground with it. Ravi picked up the baby squirrel and took him home. He kept it in a cage and gave it some puffed rice to eat. He then went away to play.

When he returned, he saw that the baby squirrel had not touched the puffed rice. It was running around the cage and was unhappy. The mother squirrel was sitting outside the window, trying to reach her baby. Ravi thought things would be better in the morning, so he had his dinner and went to sleep.

When he woke up the next day, he saw that the mother squirrel was still sitting outside his window. He realized that by separating the baby squirrel from its mother he had done something wrong. He felt sorry and freed the baby squirrel. He decided never to cage another creature again.
